STUDENT CENTER BALLROOM

Michele Norris is an award-winning journalist with more than two decades of experience. She served as co-host of NPR's newsmagazine "All Things Considered," public radio's longest-running national program, with Robert Siegel and Melissa Block. After nearly 10 years, Norris stepped away from her "All Things Considered" duties during the 2012 presidential campaign. While on sabbatical, Norris spent time traveling the country and developing two successful initiatives: The Race Card Project and NPR's Backseat Book Club. Currently a Washington Post Opinions contributor, Norris sparks important dialogue on current events, social issues and the power to make change as she breaks down commonly held beliefs and attitudes on race, diversity and bias.

This event is a collaboration between the Wayne State University Libraries, Computing & Information Technology and the Associate Provost for Diversity & Inclusion.
